

SKILLS FOR LIFE LEARNERS

Geography is a brilliant way of developing young children's natural fascination for the world around them. At TRPA, our project-based approach to teaching Geography breathes life into the subject that we hope will encourage some of our children to think of the subject as a way into their future careers. They will be exposed to many transferable skills, such as research, observation, measurement, recording and presentation. They will acquire these skills alongside developing and expanding their knowledge about people and places from all around the globe.
